THE statement telegraphed out by the London correspondent of the Times of India to the effect " that it is affirmed on apparently good authority, that China expects some territory as a compensation for the annex-Bhamo," may be characterised as a mere canard. In the first place there is good reason to believe that the Peking Government when regarding with approval the British by wholly different and less selfish consider ations. That town is a small placevaluable at present only for its proper. A narrow strip of Shan territory intervenes between Bhame and Yunnan frontier, but if this were caded with Bhame to China it would confer little advantage on that country while it would be most decidedly detrimental to Burmese and British interests, for they would then cease to have undisputed and exclusive control of the river Irrawaddy. It will be evident, therefore, that no proposed cession of territory, however small, which involved such a sacrifice, is likely to receive the sanction of the British Government. If a rectification of the southern frontier of Yunnan abutting on the Burmese Shan states is shown to be desirable or just, it is possible the Indian The Treaties between France and China, 1885, Government would agree to such rectification, on the 21st December, says :- Captain Crighton and traise the to found a "Bishop's Prize." PUBLIC SCHOOL. The annual distribution of prizes to the scholars of this institution who have distinguished themselves by their school work took place at noon on Saturday. There was a moderate attendance of ladies and gentlemen, parents or Lordship's invitation to preside at the distribufriends of the boys, or others interested in the | tion of prizes. Agentlemen, the position I occupy is rather an in- ing for a particular end, and that someone who have been apparently in good health. The allotment of the prives has been made on the results of that examination partly, and partly upon what I could arrive at with regard to the work that has been done during the year just closed. The course of the school—the currionlum-we are thinking of extending in our revised prospectus. We intend to introduce, in addition to the present subjects, two modern languages. French and German; chemistry, as a branch of science, and we are also to introduce the theory and practice of music. The object in introducing these subjects will of course commend itself to every one who tion of the trade and productions of Western was looked and no one from within responding and even elbow. character. Boys frequently leave when they have only been in the School a comparatively short

The next performance of the Company will be | time. I would ask, where it is possible, that parents should be kind enough to give us due notice of the removal of the boys for various reasons. One, particularly, would be this, that if we knew any boy was leaving at the end of the term, we might be able to give a little more attention to his studies, and so send him away a little better equipped than he otherwise could be. When we have extended our curriculum we hope really to make the School what it is called, a public school; that its course should be the one adopted by the public schools at home, and in that way we hope to obviate the necessity of the boys being removed, and they will be able to complete their education here. Another scheme which we have in view is this that the school should be affiliated to the Cambridge University-(applause)-that is every year we ought to have conducted here, at every Christmas, a Cambridge local examination. Cambridge local examination at home is found to be of inestimable advantage to the boys who are prepared for it. Some of the advantages which are attached to it are that it excuses various preliminary examinations. For instance, the Incorporated Law Society and the Royal College of Surgeons will take the certificate of the Cambridge University local examination in lieu of their own preliminary examination, and the undergraduate is excused from parts of his university course. In addition there are ad vantages to be gained from it in connection with the Eton, Rugby, and Marlborough Public Schools, which yearly grantscholarships to a numbor of boys who pass those Cambridge local examinations. It would be a grand thing if any of our boys were able to go through the Cambridge local examination with such credit that they might compete for such scholarships in one of the public schools at home. (Applause). The re-nult: of the work connected with the Cambridge cal examinations which I have had to do wit have been that in my last school I sent up ! boys, and out of these 21 there was only one fuilare. (Applause). I look forward to equally good results from our school here. I find there s certainly very good material to work upon, and I really hope that at the next Christmas examination we shall find the boys we send up are quite as successful as those sent up at home. have also introducted a system of registry marks. Each boy will have his mark book, which he will have marked every day the lessons and at the end of the week his percentage will be taken. He will not be comparing himself, therefore, with any other boys in the same class, but will compare himself with a standard: We hold according to this standard that if a boy obtains 75 per cent. of marks he has done well; anything. below 50 per cent, would not be considered creditable. In the examination of this registers we wish to ask the parents to be kind enough to assist us, so that they may know for thomsolves exactly what their boys have been doing each week. I have also had printed some public school bints for boys. A boy of ten fails to learn simply because he does not given to each boy, and will enable him to set about his work in something like a methodical and reasonable way, and if he follows these hints I am sure he will find his work very much more ing the right way from the wrong. (Hear hear.) With regard to the prizes on the table now, I know how to learn. This code of bints will be successful than if he sets about it without knowancy that some of the boys will say there is a very small number, and they will be somewhat disappointed; but I may say this, there are in the building a great many more valuable prizes than those on the table, but I could not recommend the Committee to award those prizes this year. The plan which I have adopted is this, for each subject that the School was examined on, one prize has been awarded. Where one boy gained more than three prizes, the next highest boy takes the prize. There are two prizes more valuable than the others; they are the work prize for the year and the examination prize. on a quicksand at Sha Kia Tau, or Big Island, The examination prize is certainly the most valuable—I am not now speaking from a money point of view, but as showing what is the pos tion the boy occupied in the school after having gone through the examination which we conducted at the end of the year. I may say that the examination was conducted strictly on the Cambridge local plan—the papers were Cambridge local examination papers, which pably rendered the work more difficult the boys, as they were new to them. examination prize is therefore awarded to the boy who did best all through the examination. It would have been a mistake if we had taken all the prizes which were sent out to us by the Bishop and awarded them indiscriminate-

y, as a prize loses its value altogether if it is not given for a specific object. If they are distri-buted wholesale to the School, no encouragement is given to the boy who has done his best and there is danger of a boy thinking he has done well when he has done comparatively badly. With these few remarks I will close by saying I hope that the coming year will prove satis factory to all the boys and their parents; and that whatever I have held out as hopes for the future will be in every way fulfilled. (Applause). His Excellency then distributed the prizes, and having completed the list he addressed those present as follows :- Your Lordship, ladies and gentlemen, before we separate I wish to state ing that he has no knowledge of any scheme that I received with very great pleasure your years ago on a similar occasion in this room. think this is an establishment that deserves every encouragement and support, for, if I understand aright, this is the principal establishment in all and education of European boys belonging to the Protestant Church, and the doors of this place are open not only to the residents of Hongkong but to the sons of the people who reside at the Coast Ports and who avail themselves of the He said-Your Excellency, we meet now under advantages here offered. Lui Asui, coolie, was charged with stealing two bed coverlets, value 32, and being armed with a deadly weapon, not being the holder of a night pass, on the 8th inst.

A man named Li Asau, living at 30, Highstreet went out on Friday, looking the door of his room. He returned after a short absence, and found his door opened, and the defendant inside with the articles in his possession. He seized the man, who at once began to fumble under his cost. A clansman of the complainant came up and they searched the man, finding a dagger under his coat.

The defendant said he was catching a rat. Fined $10, and in default of payment committed to gaol for mx weeks.

Antonio Barretto, broker, was summoned on 5 charge of having assaulted Fu Shi, bill collector. on the 7th inst. The complainant said he was bill collector in the employ of Mr. Daver, and he went to the defendant to collect the amount of a bill due. He had been there several times before to collect this amount, but had always been put off. The defendant sought to put him off again, but he re-fused to go without the money. The defendant then assaulted him, and he ran out into the street the defendant pursuing him and again assaulting him in the street. A Sikh constable came up, and defentant gave him in charge. The constable said he saw the complainant strike Mr. Barretto with his fist three times. Mr. W. Legge, who was subprensed by his Worship's direction, said he was near the Clock Tower, and saw the complainant go up to the defendant and present a piece of paper to him The defendant struck him two or three times, and drove him under the Hongkong "Hotel verandah. He followed the complainant up, and the latter ran across the road, still pursued by Mr. Barretto, who continued striking him. Sikh collstable came up and seized the complainant, but witness told him to take the defendant as well. The defendant said "I will be if I go," and he became very noisy and excited, and said he did not care a --- for witness or Mr. McCulloch or all Hongkong.

His language was very bod.

The defendant said the complainant struck him first and worried him about a bill. He was convicted and fined $5. and mulcted a further $2 as compensation for the complainant. There was also a cross charge of assault by Mr. Barretto against the complainant in the above ease, but that was dismissed. OBSTRUCTIVE SAMPANS.

Five sampan proprietors were summoned on charges of obstructing the fairway of the steamer City of Peking by making fast to her while under way coming into the harbour on the 7th

The defendants alleged that the steamer had stopped when they made fast to her, but they were convicted and fined $10 each.

LOSS OF THE BRITISH BARQUE " TEKLEE!

The Shanghai papers announce the loss of the British harque Tekles, news of which disaster was conveyed to that port by the Chinese steamer Yungning from Wenchow. It seems that the Teklee, having loaded at Wenchow with furs, alum, vermicelli, &c., left that port on the 31st December for Hongkong, and while attempting, on the 2nd instant, to get over the third crossing, which is about three miles from the town, struck and soon commenced to settle down. In about three hours after the accident, the vessel was full of water and was going out of sight fast being embedded in the sand up to the rail when the Yungning passed her. The crew set to work with the assistance of some natives to save the cargo, ship's rigging, etc. The Chinose sent a gunboat and soldiers to protect the wreck. The wreck lies only a little way, from five to six fathoms, out of the regular channel, so that at present she is a danger to navigation. The sandbank upon which the barque went ashore is 14 feet at high tide, but uncovered at low water. A Custom House officer acted as pilot. The Teklee belonged to a Singapore firm.

The Archbishop Mr. Conghtrie, who kindly examined the led Colonel Sladen to a seat, and they conversed in the presence of more than 200 assembled priests. Colonel Bladen informed the Archbishop that he wished to disabuse his mind of the reports spread by designing persons that injury would result to the Buddhist religion from a British occupation. A conversation followed. and finally the Archbishop in Colonel Sladen's presence dictated an episcopal edict, calling on all priests to refute the evil reports that had been promulgated, and to assure the people that the English had no intention of interfering with the religion of the country. The edict further called upon all priests and people to submit to the authority of the British Government.

"In this way," replied George; "I learnt then for the first time how painfully innocent I was. I realised my own excessive verdantness—the result of my parent's wellintentioned but ill-advised policy of always · keeping me shut up in the country, away from the world, a system which I had been foolish enough, no doubt from the force of habit, to continue after their death. The Buchannan affair showed me that this was all wrong; that my education—the education of experience-had been sadly neglected, a very common mintake with parents."

"My dear George," exclaimed Mr. Mainton, with some surprise and a little irony, "Tyou appear to have developed a philosophical turn. Have you taken to reading lately ? *

After that Buchannan affair occurred, my first fedlings of disgust prompted me to rush back into my old refirement; but when I got home I began to reflect—quite a new occupation for me-and I soon concluded that it was a ridiculous thing that a man of my age could not venture into the world for fear of being awindled and befooled. I saw that all I required was experience. These considerations led me, then, to the determination of immediately returning to town, where I remained until we started upon this ramble through the Continent last week. But, my dear old friend, I must now confess that my time was hardly spent in the manuer you would imagine. I felt that I needed self-reliance, which I should never have acquired under the kind. but perhaps somewhat mistaken, guardianship which you, feeling towards me as a second father, would have insisted upon had you known I was in Landon. For some months I went the pace; not like a wild boy fresh from school, but in a quiet, methodical, and observant fashiou of my own. Mr. Buchannan was playing with a freedom which appeared almost reckless. He allowed no hand to pass him without betting, and he forced the game, which was unlimited, by doubling or trebling the "blind" whenever his turn came, and by calling desperately high "rises" when the opportunity occurred. Frequently he lost, but only when the stakes were low; more frequent ly he won, on which occasions the pool was invariably large. In poker the winner has the deal, and George soon noticed that the eards were much more often with either Buchapaan or his wife than with any of the other players. A PICTURE OF DOUBTFUL OXIGIN. Out of all the great paintings which hang in the Louvre Gullery it would be rather! difficult to say which one pleases the most. but I like the Marsyas that hangs in the Salon Carre. It has only belonged to Louvre two years, and although it has been greatly admired it has also been the subject of much the holy of holies of this Temple of Mimmon, face was now rendered still more remarkable | criticism and heated argument as to its a very small and richly-furnished apartment, by a bright red spot upon each of her cheeks. origin. The treatment is full of purely antique feeling. It represents Apollo standing as though meditating over some immortal poem and Marsyns scated and blowing with all his might on a shepherd's reed pipe. Tho landscape around them has an Olympus like serenity and culmness; there are vast spaces filled with hills and valleys and running streams; a peaceful looking village, a bridge -with-wide-stone-arches-nad-a-few-largesycamore trees, which stand out against the golden light filling the sky. In the air a hawk is flying away with its prey clutched in its claws, a sort of premonition of the nunishment which is soon to overtake the ambitious mortal who has dared to enter into l a competition of skill with the god of music. While there could be nothing more idyllic, apparently, than this picture, it is hard to conceive of one more tragically descriptive of the stupid vanity of man struggling against the patient decrees of destiny; of the unequal contest between the unconscious powerlessness of humanity and the absolute power of the gods; of the long torture of the victim of their patient cruelty, a torture made up of alternate hope and fear-that | \ torture which we call life and which finds its most appropriate emblem in a cat playing with a mouse. - New Orleans Picayune.
